

BAG IT

WHETHER YOU WALK OR RIDE, THERE'S A BAG FOR EVERYONE - AND EVERYTHING.

Go figure: Even though more golf rounds are played by riders than walkers in America, golfers still buy way more stand bags than cart bags. And who can blame them? Stand bags are lightweight, have some nice interior space, and still fit in a cart. While less versatile, cart-specific bags have also come down in weight and offer a lot of room inside, with plenty of pockets. But you don't want to lug them over your shoulder for 18 holes. You really can't go wrong with the next bag you buy. Just make sure it suits your preferred method of getting around the course.

TAYLORMADE'S JUGGERNAUT

Taylormade's Juggernaut Cart bag ($250) boasts a 14-way stadium design top with fully integrated putter well, for easy and spacious club access. It includes nine accessible pockets up front, plus two shoe pockets in the rear.

ADIDAS ADIZERO

At just 3.8 pounds, adidas Golf's adizero stand bag ($160) is a comfort story. The ventilated foam shoulder strap and hip pad enhance air ventilation, and ease the load on your shoulders.

OGIO'S GROM

OGIO's Grom stand model ($240) sports a 14-way top with full-length dividers. Unique features include a zipper-less ball pocket and a load-equalizing suspension system for extra comfort when carrying it.

NIKE'S PERFORMANCE HYBRID

Nike's Performance Hybrid ($200) features specialized compartments, a cushioned double strap with mesh lining, and a mesh back pad for better ventilation. The base is made to not slip.

OGIO'S CHAMBER

OGIO's Chamber cart bag ($300) boasts the Silencer club protection system with 14 individual club compartments that incorporate a protective membrane to center and gently hold the shaft of each club.

PING'S HOOFER

PING's five-pound Hooper stand bag ($190) balances comfort and accessibility, making club carrying easy. A five-way mesh-covered top is reinforced for more durability, while new dual-sliding adjustable straps and a leg retention strap add convenience.

SUN MOUNTAIN C-130

Sun Mountain's C-130 cart bag ($214) is designed for cart use, with features such as a reverse-orientation top, three utility handles on the top, and a cart strap channel. All pockets are accessible when the bag is strapped to a cart.

CALLAWAY'S HYPER-LITE 3.5

Callaway's Hyper-Lite 3.5 stand bag ($160) weighs just 3.5 pounds. The 8.5-inch, four-way top has two full-length dividers. Both the extra-padded double strap and foam hip pad enhance comfort.

SRIXON'S LIGHTWEIGHT

Srixon's lightweight stand bag ($140) features a 9.5-inch, eight-way top with full-length dividers. Ergonomic rubber foot pads provide 360-degree flexibility, while rubber feet prevent twisting.
