

"Ariba! Ariba!" ★★ (Comedy, 1997)

Two tourists (Damon Wayans, Adam Sandler) stumble into trouble when customs agents suspect they're smuggling procurement software out of Mexico.

"Bill & Ted's Excelon Adventure" ★★ (Comedy, 1998)

A pair of hapless computer programmers (Edward Norton, Edward Furlong) accidentally integrate their company's computer system with the supercomputers at the Pentagon.

"Calico Commerce" ★★ (Drama, 1999)

Two humane society workers (Bradley Whitford, Richard Schiff) go undercover to break up a ring of cat burglars (Emilio Estevez, Charlie Sheen) selling felines through pet stores and over the Web.

"Commerce One, Treasury Zero" ★

(Comedy, 1977) Rival U.S. Cabinet secretaries (Tim Conway, Harvey Korman) wreak havoc as they try to one-up each other in Washington high society.

"Descartes Before the Horse" ★★★★★ (Drama, 1983)

A philosopher and mathematician (Gerard Depardieu) conquers his fear of equestrian pursuits and eventually heads up a delivery service serving the entire French countryside.

"Dying Young" ★★ (Drama, 1998)

A young dot-com executive (Campbell Scott) finds there's nothing he can do to save his floundering e-market.

"Descartes Before the Horse""Ariba! Ariba!"*"E-nough Already!" ★ (Comedy, 1999)

An advertising executive (John Cleese) rebels against the trend of putting an "e" in front of every word in order to look hip.

"Free Markets" ★★ (Comedy, 1994)

The nephew (Michael J. Fox) of a grocery magnate (Fritz Weaver) begins to suspect his uncle is crazy after the man inaugurates reverse auctions for all the food in the stores.

"I Too" ★★★★★ (Drama, 1990)

A little boy (Macaulay Culkin) insists on tagging along with his father (Harrison Ford) as the man investigates what's plaguing his company's worldwide supply chain.

"Interwoven Lives" ★★★★★ (Drama, 1998)

At a conference in New Orleans, a small group of Web site developers (Hugh Grant, Renee Zellweger, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Ewan McGregor) meet and discover the difference between content and being content.

"Line56" ★ (Science Fiction, 1995)

A family (Bruce Willis, Demi Moore, Liv Tyler) struggle with life in a grim futuristic society where getting even the necessities of life requires standing in queues for hours on end.

"Open Market" ★★ (Comedy, 1998)

Two competing real estate agents (David Schwimmer, Mathew Perry) and their clients (Courteney Cox, Jennifer Aniston) bid against each other for the same 900 square-foot house in Silicon Valley owned by two eccentric dot-com millionaires (Matt LeBlanc, Lisa Kudrow).

"Purchase Pros" ★★★★★ (Comedy, 1998)

Two teen-age girls (Hilary Swank, Angelina Jolie) wreak havoc as they try to one-up each other in the boutiques on Fifth Avenue.

"SciQuest 2012" ★★ (Science Fiction, 1997)

A scientific mission to research the manufacture and sale of chemicals on an international space station goes awry when a pair of technicians (David Spade, Enrico Colantoni) discover there is no liquidity in outer space.

"VerticalNet" ★ (Thriller, 1999)

A trapeze performer (Ryan Phillippe) is crippled when a malevolent roustabout (Harry Dean Stanton) sets up the safety apparatus perpendicular to the ground instead of parallel.

"Vignettes of Spring" ★★★★★

(Drama, 1996) Slow-moving French film about a quartet of women (Juliette Binoche, Julianne Moore, Juliette Lewis, Julia Roberts) trying to cull through the piles of fashion catalogs that have been piling up since the Christmas holidays.

"Web Methods" ★★★★★ (Documentary, 1989)

A fascinating Oscar-nominated look at how spiders and other arachnids build their habitat. Narrated by Peter Parker.